

We claim:

1. An access control system, comprising:
a surface acoustic wave sensor which outputs a signal indicative of a distorted print; and a processor which compares the distorted print signal to one or more identity patterns and controls access to a restricted item based on results of said comparison.